GREAT CROP HARVEST IN SOUTH WISCONSIN

CAMPAIGN TO GET UNDER WAY AFTER MIDDLE OF AUGUST

[BY DAVID LAWRENCE]
Copyright 1924, by the Janesville Gazette—Special Correspondence
Washington—The presidential campaign will not begin in earnest until after the second week in August. President Coolidge's speech of acceptance, which originally was to have preceded that of the democratic nominee as per custom, has been postponed and the reversal of the order may have some bearing on the way the campaign will be unfolded.

Hay crops will bulk with rich clover, alfalfa and timothy, for southern Wisconsin is now cutting its record hay crop. This means good feed for the dairy cows, and the good dairy cows, alfalfa and clover yielded easily 25 percent more than the last two years. The only trouble (Continued on Page 5)

R. R. COMMISSION ORDERS FIRST WARD LINE LEFT ALONE

TRACTION COMPANY TO PAVE SMALL SECTION OF ONE STREET.
Gettle Upholds Corporation and Tells City "Lay Off"

The application of the Janesville Traction company to abandon its line upon Washington street north of the railroad tracks will not be granted by the Wisconsin railroad commission early, Mr. Gettle, chairman of the commission made the above statement Wednesday morning at the public hearing of the board in the city hall.

Although the company will not be allowed to abandon its line, it was suggested by Mr. Gettle, that some step be taken by the city administration to relieve the carrier of future paving costs. The traction company, according to W. C. Sparks vice president and general manager, and Paul Grubb, assistant manager, would like to have the paving assignment upon the present two block stretch upon North Washington street. But they feel that if additional assessments are levied against them on future programs, it would be a physical impossibility to pay.

"It is a well known fact," said Mr. Grubb, that the streetcar line is operating at a loss. This has been particularly true of the past few months. The cost of paving from Highland avenue to the end of the line and from Milwaukee point avenue to the railroad tracks would entail too great an expense for us to bear. We would in addition be forced to stand a national expense of doing special work at the railroad crossings. The total expense would undoubtedly reach between $35,000 and $40,000.

"We are willing," continued the street car company's attorney, "to pay for the present two block stretch upon North Washington street, but we are not willing some assurance is given us that we will not be assessed for future work upon the street."

"The work upon North Washington street would not constitute a change of grade in the rails, according to Mr. Sparks and engineers of the company.

"The Riverside Park Line will undoubtedly make this line more popular," he said, "and its discontinuance would be a hardship upon the residents of the district."

"The hearing held in the municipal court chamber was attended by over 100 residents. Adolph Kanneberg and A. R. McDonald, members of the railroad commission, were not present.

TOBACCO TRADE
WAR WITH POOL

300,000 Southern Growers to Demand Federal Investigation of Methods.

New York.—Open warfare between 300,000 southern tobacco farmers, members of co-operative marketing associations, on the one side, and the Imperial Tobacco company of Great Britain, on the other, is believed to be imminent. It was said following the failure of a recent peace move by the farmers. The mission which went to England recently to have the dominant British company call off its hound of the co-operatives and drop its antagonism has just reported the failure of negotiations, and plans are said to be in preparation now for a counter offensive in behalf of the American growers.

A double-barreled attack is in prospect. The farmers plan first to demand an investigation by the federal trade commission of the alleged unfairness of the British company and propose then to conclude negotiations with the Consumers' Co-operative societies of England so as to carry the fight to the Imperial in its own markets.

Accused of Boycotting
Charges of boycotting, intimidation of farmers and other unfair methods have been made against the Imperial almost since the beginning of the cooperative movement among the tobacco growers of Virginia, the Carolinas, Kentucky, Tennessee and Indiana almost two years ago. The co-operatives were formed to aid the grower in getting a larger return for his crop and to do away with excessive profits of middlemen and commission agents. But, although American tobacco and cigar manufacturers bought extensively from the co-operative associations, the Imperial has depended on the American crop for almost all of its tobacco leaf, and is said to have consistently refused to deal with them.

Seek Friendly Relations
The situation became serious during the last year that the co-operative associations decided to send representatives to meet with the Imperial's executive board in London and to seek some way of establishing a friendly business relation. Among the American representatives were Judge Robert W. Bingham, of Louisville; Oliver J. Hanks, of Baltimore; Richard L. Aaron, of New York; and Samuel S. Sapiro, general counsel to the co-operatives.

Affidavits were submitted in support of all these charges, according to the commission's report, but to no purpose, and the conference ended without result. The affidavits now are to be used in the forthcoming action against the Imperial before the federal trade commission as the basis for charges of discrimination and unfair competition.

Before leaving London, however, the representatives of the co-operative association met the leaders of the great consumers' co-operatives in England, which have a membership of several millions and distribute many millions of dollars' worth of commodities, such as groceries, clothing and the like annually. The American mission's report sets forth that a proposal was made to the British retail co-operatives to have 50,000,000 pounds of American tobacco, supplied by the American farmers' organizations for manufacture in England, then to be sold by the British co-operatives under their own brand in competition with the brands of cigarettes and tobaccos controlled by the Imperial. This proposal was submitted tentatively and is still the subject of negotiations.

BADGER SEED MEN
MEET IN MADISON

Discuss Development of Production of Seed in Wisconsin.

Madison.—In an effort to determine the best seed varieties for Wisconsin and to carry Wisconsin forward in production and distribution of seed, seed dealers from all parts of the state met here Wednesday for the first annual seed conference sponsored by the Wisconsin college of agriculture.

Wisconsin is one of the foremost seed producing states in the nation, Prof. R. A. Moore of the college told the conference at the opening session. He declared that the Badger state has developed probably more new standard varieties of corn seed than any other state, and urged the drying for seed of all kinds.

"For more than 20 years Wisconsin has been a leader in the breeding of standard varieties of corn seed," declared Prof. Moore. "When the state began standardizing corn seed, there were approximately 200 different varieties of scrub corn seed used in the state. Today approximately half of all the state's corn is of the Golden Breeze variety, a Wisconsin product. The number of varieties has been reduced to approximately 10."

Prof. Moore estimated that there is an increased acreage of corn in the state, and that the present prospects point to a favorable crop, he said.

As an indication of the lead Wisconsin has taken in a corn producing state, Prof. Moore made the following production comparison for the four year period ending 1922: Average yield per state per acre: Missouri, 22.3 bushels; Illinois, 22.3; Ohio, 21.8; Indiana, 21.8; Wisconsin, 21.8; Iowa, 21.8; and Wisconsin, 21.8. John D. Jones, state commissioner of agriculture, welcomed the seed men. Other speakers included: P. W. Kellogg, president of the Wisconsin Grain Seed Dealers' association; G. M. Briggs, soybean extension specialist; L. E. Fisher, alfalfa specialist; H. D. Schmidt, hard seed investigator; J. G. Hilsen, plant pathologist; Henry Nichols, Fond du Lac county; and A. L. Stone, state seed inspector and one of the leaders of the conference. Henry Lutz of the college is presiding at the conference.

HEALY ADVOCATES
INCREASED TESTING

Reputation and Trade for Wisconsin Stock Built Largely by Test Work.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]
Plymouth, Wis.—The tuberculosis testing of dairy herds has been the greatest factor in creating a demand for Wisconsin dairy cattle in other states and nations. Dr. J. Healy, in charge of accredited herd work for the state, told the annual convention of the Wisconsin Veterinary Medical association here.

Dr. Healy reported a large increase in tuberculosis test work in Wisconsin during the past year.

"Veterinarians of the state should give considerable attention to the tuberculosis testing of dairy cattle," declared Dr. Healy. "They should promote it among cattle breeders and farmers as it is one of the greatest factors in selling stock."

"Cattle buyers have come to Wisconsin from many states and nations primarily because of the reputation Wisconsin has established in tuberculosis test work. They have found that where the cattle are tested or no pneumonia has been taken in this direction. Badger dairymen stand foremost in the matter. By promoting this work, veterinarians can assist in carrying Wisconsin forward as a dairying state."

A delay in work was caused for a time by the lack of funds for the state but he said that the work is now going forward rapidly.

VILLAGES CANNOT
SET OFF ARTERIAL
HIGHWAY STREETS

Madison.—Cities in Wisconsin have power to designate arterial highway streets but villages do not, according to conclusions drawn from an opinion given today by Assistant Attorney General Bump to J. C. Ticknor, district attorney at Menomonie. The opinion is declared to be highly important in view of recent controversies and questions regarding arterial roads in suburbs of Milwaukee and other cities over the state. Mr. Bump's opinion held that cities can designate such even when the streets intersect state trunk highways. Legislation by the next legislature to authorize villages and townships to make designations probably will be asked.

And About the Crops in General

In fact the news of crops should be the most interesting thing we read in the paper. On the crops depends the prosperity of all of us, no matter in what business we are engaged or to what profession we are attached unless perhaps it may be that of the funeral director. We are going to have enough and to spare this year. Grain is in good condition, though here and there a pessimist speaks, saying that the rust in the oats will lessen the yield. Corn has been backward but is coming along these last few days so fast that one can almost hear it grow. We need hay in this dairy country and the hay crop this year is fully 100 per cent, taking the ten-year average. In fact, if the statisticians permitted it, we would say it is about 110 per cent at least from the tonnage estimated and per acre yield. Corn is going up in price, wheat is as high now as at anytime in 1923 and going upward. Fine crops of grain in the wheat belt, beginning at Kansas and extending north, into Nebraska and the Dakotas, also a good prospect for early harvest in Montana, are reported. The "Rain in the Northwest" is being reduced and the better prospect has cheered up many a farmer and grain grower. A good crop and the aid given by the government finance board to buy livestock and add to the assets of the grain farmer, will make it possible to have an income from something beside the one crop gamble. On the whole, crop prospects are so good that all business has been stimulated in the last few weeks into a new and optimistic outlook.

Why not put a sign at the crossings, "Say it with safety," not flowers.

The Giggle at Death

A youth, driving his father's car struck a man with his auto which threw the body under an advancing street car and the life was crushed from the victim.
"Go ahead!" screamed two girls and another youth in the back seat, and the driver, 17 years of age, stepped on the gas in terror at what he had done. In court one of the girls who had been in the back seat—who was 19—laughed and giggled until the court gave her a scathing rebuke. It was a good joke and another "experience" for her. This happened in Kansas City although the place does not really matter. What one gets out of it is that the youth and his companions had forgotten that they owed anything whatever to society or any consideration for the rights of others.

We have built up too many of the individual egoist to the exclusion of these better thoughts and higher purposes—made a group of the younger race into selfish and self-centered persons—who have no consideration for anything but themselves. To giggle over a crushed and mangled body of a human being is a bravado demonstration that is far removed from the petty trifles of life and conventionality.

We need some definite method of educating the youth to a greater appreciation of those cardinal virtues which after all, simple and old as they may be, are yet the biggest and most important attributes of well-balanced womanhood and manhood.

We have raised and are raising some of the finest types of girls and boys here in the United States who ever came to adult years. But we need more of them and fewer of the other kind. With the marvelous advantages within reach of every girl and boy in books and learning, we should have plenty of fun but less of what borders on the criminal. And it is criminal not to consider the neighbor and the others in the community.

Crop reports show oats are rusting but this does not apply to the soil variety.

It is said that man will never reach the top of Mt. Everest, the highest peak in the world. Nonsense! It takes human ingenuity and endurance and nothing that has required these two elemental factors has remained unconquered for very long. Standing on the earth's poles, flying across continents and around the world, sealing ice floes and crossing vast chasms—these are the things man has done when thousands said they could not be done. Mt. Everest will be climbed as surely as it is a mountain.

EFFECT OF LIGHT ON PLANTS

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN.
Washington.—The affection of plants for the kindly sun, so long proclaimed by observing poets, appears to be a trifle exaggerated. A rose can be made to grow and bloom under a yellow electric light, or an artificial light of blue, red, or any other color, and it will still be a rose and look just about the same as if it had been "kissed by the gentle sunbeams."
Experiments in raising plants under colored light have been conducted in the past, and the experimenters have emerged from their weirdly colored green house laboratories to report that under blue, green, or purple light plants failed to develop normally. Even red and yellow were said to be inefficient, though the pure white sunlight which combines all colors.
But as Dr. W. W. Garner, of the department of agriculture and his associates, H. A. Allard and Dr. R. A. Steinberg, continued this remarkable work with the effect of light on plants, they got around to the question of colored light with the interesting results already mentioned. Dr. Garner and Mr. Allard have already proved a revolutionary theory to account for the fact that chrysanthemums bloom in November, and common lilies bloom in May, and polyanthus bloom in December. Temperature had always been regarded as the controlling factor in this question of seasonal blooming. And yet, florists had tried to make cosmos bloom in off seasons in greenhouses by keeping the temperature at a September level—with no luck.
"The important factor which has been overlooked," says Dr. Garner, "is the length of the day. When cosmos are exposed to light for the number of hours that a September day would give them, they make haste to bloom. Plants may be injured or benefited by changes in temperature and in the intensity of light. Some are very sensitive to these factors. But, in general, life habits of plants do not depend on such unchangeable conditions. Every plant has its own length of day, allowing for slight calendar variations, and plants have been under the influence of the unchanging cycles of light for thousands of years; so it is not surprising that the plant world is governed by them."
This theory has been tested by government experiments on nearly 200 varieties of plant life, including trees, wild and cultivated flowers, farm crops, and weeds. Varieties that bloom when the days are short are called by the experimenters short day plants, and those that bloom under long light exposure are called long day plants. By rolling trucks laden with specimens into dark houses, the days can be shortened in some experiments, and by lighting greenhouses at night the days are short are called by the experimenters short day plants, and those that bloom under long light exposure are called long day plants. By rolling trucks laden with specimens into dark houses, the days can be shortened in some experiments, and by lighting greenhouses at night the days are short are called by the experimenters short day plants, and those that bloom under long light exposure are called long day plants.

Keeping a flower from blooming is easy enough by the new light theory. Some cosmos grow up from seed during the spring in a long-day greenhouse that was illuminated from sunset to midnight. In June the plants were moved out of doors when they received only normal summer sunlight. Not until October came and the days were the right length for cosmos to bloom did these specimens produce any blossoms. The plants were then 15 feet high.
This is the freakish sort of thing that sometimes happens when plants are brought to the United States from the tropics. Often these specimens grow to ridiculous heights and never produce flowers or seed because the sunlight ration is never just right for those processes.
One of the most striking proofs of the light theory is a specimen which has a cluster of blossoms on one branch and no flowers on another. One branch of the plant was induced to flower by giving it the exact light-day necessary, whereas the other branch was covered from the light during a part of each day. Both plants, through the same stalk, but the light rays affected only the spray that was uncovered. The other spray continued to grow normally but without producing buds.
From lengthening and shortening the days for plants it seems only a step to experimenting with artificial daylight; but Dr. Garner found that this was quite a different proposition. When the plants were exposed to light a few hours overtime each day, very weak electric light was adequate. Midday sunlight may be equal to 10,000 foot-candles—the intensity of 10,000 standard candles at a distance of one foot. But for the lengthening of a day, electric light equals five or ten foot-candles was sufficient for most specimens.
When no sunlight at all was given to specimens, however, it became necessary to use very bright electric lights. With this stimulation, plants behaved just as if they had been out of doors. If there are any mysterious qualities peculiar to sunlight they do not seem to be necessary to plant growth.

Even when ordinary yellow electric lights were replaced by lights of red or some other color the plants showed no disturbance so long as the intensity of the light was about like the sunlight to which they were accustomed. The peculiar results obtained by other experimenters would thus appear to be due to the colored lights being weak. It was not the color, blue, for instance, but the lack of sufficient light, that flowers in such experiments found "depressing."

Dr. Garner says that just as there is a difference in the value of foods, so there may be a difference in the efficiency of different colored lights as plant stimulants, but this difference does not seem to be very great.

The experiments in raising plants entirely by artificial light are of interest chiefly to science. There is no need of expensive artificial light replacing free sunlight as a practical inducer of plant growth.

The experiments in lengthening and shortening the days to regulate blossoming and fruiting processes, on the other hand, are of great importance to practical agriculture. Florists will probably be the only specialists to make direct use of the newest knowledge about light. They have greenhouses, and it would be little trouble for them to reproduce the necessary light-day to bring different flowers into bloom at a given season.

The farmer will benefit by the new discoveries in time, indirectly at least. For instance, farmers who try to introduce new varieties of crops will be able to estimate more correctly in what latitude a crop can be expected to grow, now that they know that length of daylight must be considered as well as temperature, soil, moisture, and other factors.

It will have to be law-abiding or see their places paddocked. Some of the most flagrant will wake up to the fact that there is a God in Israel, after all.

Anyhow "The Sidewalks of New York" will not be the campaign song for the democrats.

However and notwithstanding, also likewise and therefore, may one rise in the back seat and ask how much the presence of Brother Charlie made William Jennings like the ticket?

It certainly is not reassuring to the democratic party to have Alton B. Parker and John W. Davis compared, since Parker was the worst defeated candidate before Cox.

They have elected a man as chief of Tammany who never was a gangster, and who never owned a saloon. The Volstead law seems to be reaching even to New York.

Yes, we know it takes time to do these things but after awhile most of the bootleggers will be in jail. The "higher ups" are getting it. JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST.
LIMITATIONS
I saw him in his office grand,
Austere of mouth and eye,
Where all who heard his least command
Would willingly comply.
Both men and women served his will
Throughout the busy day,
And no doubt felt a nervous chill
Whenever he came their way.
Downtown he was a ruling force,
A figure sharp and stern,
And there both young and old, of course,
His whims were quick to learn.
They knew what service pleased him best
And hastened to obey,
And seemed to take an interest
In following his way.
Men listened to his simplest word,
To none he ordered twice;
With him financial kings conferred
Respecting his advice.
"Saveme, you are," I said to him,
"From dawn unto the gloom,
Downtown they heed your slightest whim,
But how is it at home?"
Said he, "I get things quickly done
For here they fear my wrath.
At home I cannot get my son
To wash his face and comb.
And though he is my pride and joy
No heed he pays to me,
I cannot get him healthy boy
To wash his hands for tea."
"I cannot get that boy of mine
My orders to obey;
He doubts the wisdom that is mine
And has a lot to say."
When I attempt to tell him why
A boy should cleanly be,
He laughs my words in scorn. Said I—
"That's how it is with me."

Personal Health Service

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
Noted Physician and Author.
PROOF FOR THE BABY
Every baby whose food is pasteurized or boiled should be given orange juice, or peach juice, or pineapple juice, or tomato juice, from the sixth or eighth week. Begin with a tablespoonful of the clear juice daily and gradually increase the quantity to about four tablespoonfuls daily. It is best given in between the first and second milk feedings. The orange juice may be that of fresh tomato or canned tomato, of course without vinegar or other condiment or seasoning. The value of fruit juice in infant feeding is three fold. It prevents constipation, it improves the baby's digestion.
By the time a baby is eight months of age he should be ready to try his digestion on some fresh vegetables, too. But let the first trial be a very cautious one and only a wee spoonful of the pulp of the steamed or otherwise thoroughly cooked vegetable, and generally the pulp should first be run through a sieve. Any new vegetable should be given in this way. Once a day is often enough. This early addition of vegetable to the baby's diet not only prevents constipation but probably develops a vigorous digestive capacity which stands the baby in good stead in later childhood. Weak, undeveloped digestive organs are too often the result of prolonged restriction to a liquid diet.
Week by week the quantity of steamed or stewed vegetable, pulp may be increased, provided the baby shows no signs of trouble, and when he is 10 months old about two tablespoonfuls may be given daily. At the age of one year a baby ought to be taking his vegetable about the same as grownups. But not so with respect to fruit.
It is generally best to cook all the fruit a baby or older child eats, until the age of four years. Stewed peaches, stewed pears, stewed apples, cooked figs, apples stewed or baked, baked banana or stewed pear may be given a baby over 10 months of age. These fruits should be carefully freed of skins or any stringy material. Raw fruit should be withheld until the child is over three years of age, as a rule. The use of fruit as a preventive and remedy for constipation is well known to every one.
From the age of eight months, about three times a week, a baby should receive some fresh meat broth, and later meat gravy thickened with flour. Meat broth is of some value as a laxative item, aside from its food value.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.
"Baby's Stomach."
I am told by old women that change of life causes headache, dizziness, swelling of the feet and many other troubles. Kindly advise me if I do something for same? (Mrs. S. G.)
Answer—You can't do much for them—they're too set in their superstitions. But I can assure you that there is no such thing as change of life so far as disturbance of a woman's health is concerned. Better not entertain any such fool notions—or women's tales—about your health just as though there were no question of sex or age.
I use a heavily lined bread pan to set bread sponge and raise bread. The tin has a hole in the bottom and it has a rusty or blackish look. Is it injurious to the family to use this or would a new one be advisable? (Mrs. R. L.)
Answer—It is all right to use it, even if it is rust, that is harmless. The rust oxide is often given as a medicine.
Anthrax.
Kindly give instructions to prevent contracting anthrax from a new shaving brush. (W. J. W.)
Answer—There is no longer any danger of anthrax from such brushes. The method of sterilizing shaving brushes is as follows: Soak the brush in a solution of one ounce of standard (40 per cent strength) formalin (liquor formaldehyde) with one quart of water, for 24 hours, occasionally agitating the brush to be sure the solution reaches all the bristles. Then rinse it repeatedly with clear water and the brush is ready for use.
Where do you get the idea, reiterated in your column so often, that boys are preferred to girls? It seems to me that the opposite is the rule. Anyhow a boy is certainly no more of an annoyance than a girl. You also have silly notions about pink and blue ribbon for babies, but refer to the home physician anyone who asks for real medical advice. (Mrs. D. M. L.)
Answer—Well? (Copyright, National Newspaper Service.)

A. Collectively nouns take singular or plural predicates according to the meaning intended. In this case the noun "number" is modified by "total," which would make a singular verb necessary.

Q. How long does it take to transmit a photograph by telephone?
A. B. P. The Telephone News says that in a recent demonstration a picture was taken in Cleveland, developed, and sent to New York, redeveloped and was ready for reproduction for newspaper purposes in 22 minutes. The actual transmission of a 5x7 inch photograph requires less than five minutes.

Q. Please tell Abe Martin's real name and where he lives?
A. His name is Frank McKinney Hubbard and he lives in Irvington, a suburb of Indianapolis. He has been a cartoonist and paragoner on the Indianapolis News almost continuously since 1891.

Q. To settle an argument please state whether a star has ever appeared between the horns of the new moon?

Abe Martin

One of the worst things about being a cartoonist is it keeps you from being a man. We hope our girls won't read the Police Gazette while waiting to be boobied.

Q. How long does it take to transmit a photograph by telephone?
A. B. P. The Telephone News says that in a recent demonstration a picture was taken in Cleveland, developed, and sent to New York, redeveloped and was ready for reproduction for newspaper purposes in 22 minutes. The actual transmission of a 5x7 inch photograph requires less than five minutes.

Q. Please tell Abe Martin's real name and where he lives?
A. His name is Frank McKinney Hubbard and he lives in Irvington, a suburb of Indianapolis. He has been a cartoonist and paragoner on the Indianapolis News almost continuously since 1891.

Q. To settle an argument please state whether a star has ever appeared between the horns of the new moon?
A. The naval observatory says a star cannot possibly appear within the horns of the crescent moon.
